

2008 Broad Prize Selection Jury

Henry Cisneros

Chairman and CEO, CityView America

Former U.S. Secretary of Housing and Urban Development

Henry Cisneros is founder, chairman and chief executive officer of CityView America, a joint venture in home building he formed with Kaufman and Broad (now KB Home) in 2000. Previously, he was president and chief operating officer of Univision Communications in Los Angeles, the largest Spanish-language media company in the nation. In 1993, he became President William J. Clinton's first secretary of housing and urban development. Cisneros became the first Hispanic mayor of a major U.S. city when he was elected mayor of San Antonio in 1981. During his four terms as mayor, Cisneros helped rebuild the city's economic base and created jobs through massive infrastructure and downtown improvements.

John Engler

President and Chief Executive Officer, National Association of Manufacturers

Former Governor of Michigan

John Engler is president and CEO of the National Association of Manufacturers, the nation's largest industrial trade association. Formerly governor of Michigan, Engler led the state for 12 years beginning in 1990. His administration made improving education Michigan's top priority. In 1994, Engler led a successful fight for equitable school funding. As a result, all Michigan children now have a foundation grant that allows them to attend the public schools of their choice. Engler is a co-founder of The Broad Center for the Management of School Systems, a national effort dedicated to improving student achievement by recruiting, training and supporting executive leadership talent from across America to become the next generation of urban school district leaders.

Louis V. Gerstner, Jr.

Chairman, The Carlyle Group

Retired Chairman and CEO, International Business Machines Corporation

Louis Gerstner was chief executive officer and chairman of the board of IBM Corporation from 1993 until 2002. In January 2003, he became chairman of global private equity firm The Carlyle Group. Prior to joining IBM, Gerstner served for four years as chairman and chief executive officer of RJR Nabisco, Inc. This was preceded by an 11-year career at American Express Company, where he was president of the parent company and chairman and CEO of its largest subsidiary, American Express Travel

Related Services Company. Prior to that, Gerstner was a director of the management consulting firm McKinsey & Co., Inc., which he joined in 1965. A lifetime advocate of the importance of quality education, Gerstner created The Teaching Commission in 2003 to develop specific policy recommendations to deal with America's teaching crisis. From 1996 to 2002, he co-chaired Achieve, an organization created by governors and business leaders to drive high academic standards for public schools in the United States. While at IBM, he established Reinventing Education, a strategic partnership with 21 states and school districts which utilize IBM technology and technical assistance to eliminate key barriers to school reform and improve student performance.

Susan Hockfield

President, Massachusetts Institute of Technology

The 16th president of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and a noted neuroscientist, Susan Hockfield is the first life scientist to lead the university. She also holds a faculty appointment as professor of neuroscience in the department of brain and cognitive sciences, is a member of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences and a trustee of the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution. Before assuming the presidency of MIT, she was provost at Yale University, where she had taught and served as dean of the Graduate School of Arts and Sciences. After earning her Ph.D. from the Georgetown University School of Medicine, Hockfield served as a National Institutes of Health postdoctoral fellow at the University of California, San Francisco and then joined the scientific staff at the Cold Spring Harbor Laboratory.

James Hunt, Jr.

Chairman of the Board, James B. Hunt, Jr. Institute for Educational Leadership and Policy

Former Governor of North Carolina

James Hunt is a partner in the Raleigh, N.C. office of the law firm of Womble, Carlyle, Sandridge and Rice and is chairman of the board of the James B. Hunt, Jr. Institute for Educational Leadership and Policy. Formerly governor of North Carolina, Hunt is a respected national leader in education reform. During his 20 years of service as governor, he dramatically raised North Carolina's student test scores and ensured that teacher salaries were raised to match the national average. A strong supporter of high standards in public schools, Hunt served as chairman of the National Education Goals Panel and as vice chairman of the board of Achieve. He also published a book outlining his plan and describing his own experiences with public education, "First in America: An Education Governor Challenges North Carolina."

Shirley Ann Jackson

President, Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute

The 18th president of Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, Shirley Ann Jackson has held senior leadership positions in government, industry, research and academia. President Bill Clinton appointed Jackson as chairwoman of the U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission, where from 1995-1999, she reorganized the agency and completely revamped its regulatory approach. Prior to that, she was a theoretical physicist at the former AT&T Bell Laboratories and a professor of theoretical physics at Rutgers University.

Roderick Paige

Chairman, Chartwell Education Group LLC

Former U.S. Secretary of Education

Rod Paige currently serves as chairman and founder of the Chartwell Education Group, a firm working to advance the systemic improvement of education domestically and globally by providing education-related consulting services to state and local government, foundations, corporations and countries seeking American education as a model. Building on a long and distinguished career in public education, Rod Paige was the first school superintendent ever to serve as U.S. secretary of education. Serving under President George W. Bush's first term, Paige played a critical role in the passage and implementation of the historic No Child Left Behind legislation. In 1994, after leading reform for four years as a member of the Houston Board of Education, Paige became superintendent of the Houston Independent School District. In 2001, he was named National Superintendent of the Year by the American Association of School Administrators. In 2002, he received the Harold W. McGraw, Jr. Prize in Education. That same year, Houston won the inaugural Broad Prize. Prior to joining Houston Independent School District, Paige served for a decade as dean of the College of Education at Texas Southern University.

Richard Riley

Partner, Nelson Mullins Riley & Scarborough LLP

Former U.S. Secretary of Education

Richard Riley is currently a partner in the law firm Nelson Mullins Riley & Scarborough. As governor of South Carolina during the 1980s, Riley won national recognition for successfully improving the state's educational system. He became the first governor in South Carolina history to be elected to a second term after voters passed an amendment to the constitution allowing him to run a second time. Riley was then chosen by President Bill Clinton in 1992 to serve as U.S. secretary of education. During his eight-year tenure, Riley helped launch historic initiatives to raise academic standards and improve instruction for poor and disadvantaged children. He also expanded grant and loan programs to help more Americans go to college, prepare young people for the world of work and improve teaching. Since leaving his national post in 2001, Riley continues to serve on a number of boards and work with a variety of entities to improve education across America.

Andrew Stern

International President, Service Employees International Union

Andrew Stern is the international president of the Service Employees International Union (SEIU), the largest and fastest-growing labor union in America. The SEIU represents more than 1.5 million working families, including health care workers, education workers, and other public service employees as well as building service and security workers. SEIU is a leading voice for quality education, affordable health care, and other vital services for working families and their communities.

Lawrence Summers

Charles W. Eliot University Professor, Harvard University

Lawrence Summers is the Charles W. Eliot University Professor at Harvard University, where he previously served as its 27th president from July 2001 until June 2006. He has served in a series of senior public policy positions, including political economist for the President's Council of Economic Advisers, chief economist of the World Bank, and U.S. secretary of the treasury. In 1993, Summers received the John Bates Clark Medal, given every two years to the outstanding American economist under the age of 40.

Note:

The following were recused from or were unable to participate in the 2008 Broad Prize Selection Jury:

- Kenneth Chenault, Chairman and CEO, American Express Company, Inc.
- Richard Parsons, Chairman and Chief Executive Officer, Time Warner Inc.
Donna Shalala, President, University of Miami, Former U.S. Secretary of Health and Human Services
- Mark Warner, Honorary Chair, Forward Together, Former Governor of Virginia